

Steve Howard / The Climate Group

THE CLIMATE GROUP

Steve Howard is the CEO of The Climate Group which he co-founded in late 2003. He has worked on global social and environmental issues from within business, NGO and UN settings.

The Climate Group is an international, non-profit organisation that acts independently, with no political agenda or vested interests. Its goal is to help government and business set the world economy on the path to a low-carbon, prosperous future.

The Climate Group focuses on the links between reduced greenhouse gas emissions and improved financial and economic performance. To make this happen, it engages, convenes and partners with sub-national governments and the world's most influential businesses - all of which are committed to tackling climate change.

It is working to make sure that a global deal on climate change happens, and to build the confidence and capabilities - for both business and government - to successfully put it into practice. To help advance this mission, it has partnered with former UK Prime Minister Tony Blair.

The organisation also delivers specific actions such as the Climate Week, held in New York in September 2009, during which, Michèle Sabban, AER president, could hand over, as part of a delegation made of regional representatives, a statement on climate change and regions to Ban-Ki Moon, Secretary General of the United Nations.